

INTREPID LENSMAN—There appears to be no limits to how far a photographer will go to get a picture. Here Norman Ash perches on the scaffolding of St. Stephen's Tower to get a closeup of London's famous clock, Big Ben. He was accompanied on his shaky mission by the equally intrepid Stuart Heydinger, who made this picture.

—International News Photo.