

Patent Appeal in Colonial Times

WASHINGTON.—Nearly 150 years before the United States patent law system was established, a man named Joseph Jenks petitioned a Massachusetts court for a patent, according to the National Geographic Society.

The petition, filed in 1646, asked the court's protection for an engine, invented by the petitioner, "for mills to goe by water."